NUMB. 1862

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 13. 1741.

WHOEVER ſhould attempt to make ſo much as a bare Index of the Seditious Papers which have been publiſh'd againſt the preſent Adminiſtration, would find a laborious Employment for many Months; ſo high has the Fury of Faction roſe, and ſo long has the Patience of the Government laſted. It cannot before be wonder'd, that among ſuch Multitudes of Writings ſhould go not only unanſwer'd but un-noticed. It ſurpaſſes the Strength of ordinary Men to attempt ſuch Herculean Labours, and conſequently this Augean Stable is like to go unclean'd, unleſs the CHAMPION ſhould once again change Sides, and endeavour to atone for paſt Offences by undertaking the Job. But tho' the Poſſibility be confeſſed of anſwering all, yet it would be inexcuſable not to take notice of ſome, as well in regard to the Writers themſelves, who take ſuch Pains to other Purpoſe than to be talk'd of, as out of regard to the Miniſtry and to the People, who are in equal Danger from the Projects of theſe Politicians ſhould ever ſucceed. From time to time therefore I venture to give the World my Sentiments of their moſt extraordinary Performances; for which, as I endeavour to ſet them in their true Light, I certainly merit their Thanks, tho' by a rivetted Principle of Ingratitude they treat me with Averſion: However, as my Aim is Truth, and as I long ago ridded myſelf of all Concern for what they can ſay or do to me, I ſhall continue to do them theſe good Offices; and in purſuance of this Reſolution dedicate this Paper to the Conſideration of theſe Eſſays.

The firſt of theſe is the labour'd Diſcourſe of that profound and upright Statesman Mr. Common Senſe, deliver'd on Saturday, November 7, 1741. In this elegant and ſublime Lecture, in which he modeſtly delivers his Inſtructions to a Parliament, who as yet have not heard the firſt Speech, he forges ſome Things, diſfigures many, and gives the moſt ſeditious Turn in his Power to all. In the Licence of the preſent Times, it ſeems, prompts us ſecure, it poſſible, a Majority to the Faction, by laying aſide all Reſpect to Decorum, and addreſſing himſelf to Members at a Time when all who have a true Reſpect for Parliaments are more than ordinarily cautious of taking any ſuch Step. Confidence, indeed, in ſome Caſes is of the utmoſt Conſequence, which, I ſuppoſe, was what chiefly directed the Malecontents in their Choice of Advocates; ſince this, without Breach of Truth, may be ſaid in their Favour, that never any Men were better provided with Aſſurance, or were ever leſs afraid of uſing it, in all Caſes, and toward all Perſons; ſuch the Paper before me is a moſt remarkable, and ſo clear a Point there can be any Infidels, a moſt convincing Inſtance. An Inſtance which, I confeſs, fills even me with Wonder, who have been long an Admirer of that Writer's Talent, and yet never thought his Pen Power to have thus exceeded himſelf. Yet I have ſome Comfort, that he can deceive me no more. This is certainly the utmoſt Stretch in its Kind; and tho' by much Straining he may poſſibly come up to it, yet am I poſitive neither he nor any other Man can ever go beyond it. But the Buſineſs is to make my Readers as ſenſible of this as myſelf, which I ſhall endeavour to do with all the Brevity imaginable, becauſe I muſt firſt pay my Compliments before I have done to one of his Brethren, who has alſo given ſuch a Specimen of his Proficiency in the ſame Kind, that it would be unpardonable in me to paſs him by in Silence.

The former Addreſſers to Parliament have choſen to expreſs in their Language a profound Reſpect for the Repreſentatives of the Commons of Great Britain, approaching with Awe, and ſpeaking to them with the Air of Submiſſion; as indeed while we continue a free People every Man ſhould. But for Mr. Common Senſe he has ſtruck out a new Track, and not content with ſure laying aſide of Ceremony, and treating them as a fellow well met, he talks to them throughout his Piece as if he was their Superior; lays down Rules for their Conduct, puts them in mind of former Slips, threatens them a little in caſe they do not mend their Manners, aſſures them, upon the Whole, that if they are good Boys and will mind the Buſineſs that ſhall be brought them by the Chiefs of his Faction, that then all will be well, Corruption ſhall be no more talk'd of, but every Senator ſhall be acknowledg'd a Man of Honour. This is certainly bold and new, if it does but take; tho' alas there are ſome Matters of Fact which might have been ſpared, becauſe ſome ill-natur'd People may poſſibly expect Proofs for them: Nor would this be altogether without Example, as I think nobody could be ſo weak as to think it inconſiſtent with Reaſon.

In the Beginning of the Reign of the late Queen ANNE, ſome warm Pamphleteers of our Author's Kidney thought fit to inflame the People, and to ruin ſome Great Men who ſtood in the Way of their Friends, or ſome they thought ſuch; ſome, I ſay, of theſe Pamphleteers were pleaſed to give out, that in the preceding Reign a Deſign had been form'd for ſetting aſide the Succeſſion of the then Queen. This Story did admirably well, till the Parliament took Notice of it, and having ſent for ſome of theſe ingenious Gentlemen who were ſo well vers'd in Secrets of State, and ask'd them with Abundance of good Manners, whether they could make out the Fact they had advanced, in a common Way; that is, by Evidence, by Teſtimony, by ſomething more than their own Aſſertion. It ſo fell out that they could not; and thereupon the Houſe order'd them to be proſecuted, that was all, for no other Reaſon in the World than becauſe to ſerve their Friends and themſelves they had impoſ'd upon the Nation. True it is, that this was Forty Years ago; and yet, I believe, ſome of Mr. Common Senſe's Scholars are old enough to remember it. If therefore any of them ſhould be of ſuch an odd Caſt of Mind, as to think what he has inſinuated, of their being out of the Way upon important Occaſions for very ſignificant Reaſons, not only a Reflection upon themſelves but upon the Legiſlature, and tending to give the People an ill Idea of Parliaments: If, I ſay, there ſhould be any of theſe queer Folks, who not regarding his ſuperior Capacity, and the Right he has, as a Scribe for the Oppoſition, to ſay what he pleaſes, ſhould inſiſt on his making his Private Intelligence Publick, by naming thoſe whom he has thus impeach'd, I doubt he would hardly eſcape Cenſure, even if he ſhould alledge that he is their Father Confeſſor, and ſo bound in Conſcience not to diſcloſe the Secrets of his Chair. The Peace of a great People might be poſſibly thought of more Conſequence than the Security of himſelf or his Penitents, and then Murder muſt out. Evaſion would ſignify nothing, and, for aught I know, all the Policy of St. Omers would ſcarce enable him to rid himſelf of ſo thorny a Piece of Buſineſs. But this by the way: I only hint at Poſſibilities, and that he may have Time to recollect his Intelligence, or piece together his Story.

Again, we have heretofore heard a certain Aſſembly ſtiled the Grand Inqueſt of the Nation; and from ſome Hints in his Inſtructions one would imagine he thought them ſo ſtill. Yet in this Caſe, Addreſſes to them before their being impannell'd, is ſurely ſomewhat premature, and what can be ſcarcely juſtified. His Inſtructions contain a Multitude of Things which ſeem to require another Manner of handling, and might perhaps have deſerved a different Sort of Introduction. What Claim Mr. Common Senſe has to the Freedom he has us'd with theſe Gentlemen, is a Matter between him and them which I have nothing to do with, but this I will venture to aſſert, that if he had practis'd in this Manner upon a Country Grand Jury, the Judge of Aſſize would ſcarce have been pleas'd with his Proceeding; for whatever Notion and Rumour may be in the Opinion of Common Senſe, it is certainly no Evidence according to Common Law, eſpecially if it comes attended with ſtudied Declamation. If once this Practice was introduced in common Life, as it ſoon muſt be if it ever takes place in publick Affairs, there will be an End of our boaſted Freedom. Our Courts of Law will then become a Kind of Inquiſition, where Men may be queſtion'd for they know not what on the Teſtimony of they know not whom, and this Teſtimony at the bottom no more than the Surmize of ſome malicious, miſchievous Wretch who lives by his Invention, and like the Informers in Old Rome, can have no Subſiſtance if other People preſerve their Security. Beſides, if we ſeriouſly conſider this Inqueſt, we muſt believe them as capable of enquiring, diſcovering, and proſecuting, as this Gentleman or his Maſters, and therefore his tampering with them in this Manner before they come into Court, muſt appear as ridiculous and abſurd, as it is evidently illegal and arbitrary. But I paſs now to his Co-adjutor.

The Author I mean is the CHAMPION of the ſame Evening. The worthy Writer of this Paper tacks together the Whims of his own Brain, or the Conceits of ſome of his Companions crank'd ones, and having thus furniſh'd out a Raw-Head-and-Bloody-Bones frightful enough to ſcare any Country Aſſembly, he, to bring the Matter home, and to ſhew his Invention has been employ'd to ſome Purpoſe, tags it with this leading Queſtion, Is there ſuch a Man in Great Britain? To which in due time no doubt ſome arch Correſpondent will come forth and anſwer YES, there is, and ſo furniſh out a new Scene of Patriot Billingſgate. But what is all this to the Purpoſe? Will any Man ſay that theſe Characters might not have been drawn under any Adminiſtration? Sure I am, that they are leaſt like to be drawn under ſuch an Adminiſtration as they would ſuit beſt. A wicked, tyrannous, oppreſſive Miniſtry is always cruel, ſuſpicious and vindictive. Theſe Qualities are connected in their Nature, and as Hiſtory ſhews us they never have, ſo Reaſon informs us they are never like to be ſeparated. Now the very Enemies of this Adminiſtration admit, that it is not cruel, ſuſpicious or vindictive, nay they are pleas'd to ſay it is mild to a Fault, and that it owes its Duration to its Mildneſs. If ſo, it will not be eaſy to make any indifferent Perſon conceive, that there is any ſuch Man in Great Britain as hath been depicted by this ill-natur'd, inſolent Writer. It requires Genius, Learning, and a delicate Pencil to draw a beautiful Likeneſs; but Fell was a whimſical Imagination, half drunk, and arm'd only with a Charcoal, may sketch out on a Wall a groteſque Figure capable of turning the higheſt Character into Ridicule, that is, in the Judgment of ſuch a Circle of Spectators as generally ſurround every Painter of this Kind, Men of the ſame irregular Ideas with himſelf, who delight in Deformity, and deſpiſe Regularity, becauſe they cannot underſtand it. It is happy however for the reſt of the World, that tho' theſe Men can draw Devils they cannot make them.

I ſhall conclude this Paper with obſerving, that their Patrons are not at all oblig'd to them for not being expos'd by way of Repriſal. Nothing could be eaſier than for a Miniſtry to levy a Troop of ſuch Huſſars, or even to draw over theſe to their Service, and then employ them in beating up the Quarters from which they came. Men of this ſavage Diſpoſition, who care not what they ſay, or of whom they ſpeak, are far from being ſo conſcientious as to rail from Principle, or to make a ſcruple of turning their Artillery, if they could find their Advantage by entering into another Service. But as it is eaſy to perceive, that ſuch as deſpiſe Abuſe will deteſt the Practice of it, ſo the Maſters of theſe Scribblers are in no pain on this Head, they know very well in what their Safety conſiſts, and tho' they are conſcious of their own Infirmities, and how miſerable a Figure they would make if thus treated, yet they ſtifle their Apprehenſions by conſidering they have better Men than themſelves to deal with, ſuch as ſcorn the low Arts of Calumny and Detraction, and who, tho' they ſuffer daily from the mercileſs Attacks of abandon'd Libellers, abhor the Thoughts of heightening publick Diſturbances, by giving the ſmalleſt Countenance to a Return of ſuch Uſage, however juſt in itſelf and agreeable to the Multitude, to whom theſe Patrons of Defamation aſſiduouſly apply. If the greateſt Men have Foibles, thoſe who wou'd be great are not without them; ſo that a Perſon of moderate Genius might eaſily draw ſome very whimſical Peices which would not want this Dutch Expoſition— Is not the Picture like?— But it is enough that theſe Sort of Folks are found on one Side of the Queſtion only, and that among the Britiſh Malecontents alone are to be found Men who pique themſelves on drawing Hobgoblins to fright their ſilly Neighbours, and are content to be thought errant Slanderers, provided they may have a Reward for their malicious Fiction, which as none but themſelves would have Wickedneſs enough to ſuggeſt, ſo none but the Party they ſerve can be weak enough to believe.

Monsieur Pascal, in his most excellent Discourse of the Misery of Man, tells us, That all our Endeavours after Greatness proceed from nothing but a Desire of being surrounded by a Multitude of Persons and Affairs, that may hinder us from looking into ourselves, which is a View we cannot bear.

Had that incomparable Person Monsieur Pascal been a little more indulgent to himself, the World might probably have enjoyed him much longer: Whereas, through too great an Application to his Studies in his Youth, he contracted that ill Habit of Body, which, after a tedious Sickness, carried him off in the 40th Year of his Age: And the whole History we have of his Life till that Time, is but one continued Account of the Behaviour of a noble Soul struggling under innumerable Pains and Distempers.

The Paris Alamain of Yeſterday Se'nnight has the …following Letter from the Hague.

Hague, Nov. 7. The Doubts of People begin to clear …up, and 'tis hoped they will all vaniſh, when they come …to ſee the King of Great Britain's Speech to his Parlia…ment. Mean time 'tis now paſt all Doubt that the Dif…ferences betwixt the Queen of Hungary and the King of …Pruſſia are at length determin'd, and that the latter is to …keep his Conqueſts as far as Neiſs: And foraſmuch as he …gives up the Duchy of Jagerndorff, to which he had …Pretenſions, the Queen yields to him the Principality of …Munſterberg, with the Towns of Grotkau and Neiſs, …which made a Part of Upper Sileſia; inſomuch that …his Pruſſian Majeſty is now Duke of Lower Sileſia, and …has receiv'd the Oaths and Homage of all the States of …the Duchies, Principalities, and Lordſhips that are therein …ſituate, and alſo of all the Clergy. He has promis'd to …reeſtabliſh Breſlaw in its Privileges, and to take it into …his Protection; but the Canons of the Cathedral having …refuſ'd to recognize him, and having even withdrawn …themſelves, his Majeſty has ſequeſter'd the Revenues of …their Prebends. The Treaty which the King of Pruſſia …has juſt concluded with the Queen of Hungary is very …contradictory to that he had made with the Courts of …France, Spain, and Munich, which is nothing more than …a Convention of Neutrality with France, by which his …Pruſſian Majeſty has laid himſelf under no manner of …Engagement. If one reflects ever ſo little upon all theſe …Advices, one cannot but expect great Events, and a Re…volution in the Affairs of the Queen of Hungary.

It was publickly ſaid that the Dyet was to be open'd …on the 3d inſt. N. S. but 'tis now put off to the Month …of April. There are two Conſequences inferr'd from …this Delay: The firſt is, that it will give time to the …Elector of Bavaria to be crown'd King of Bohemia, in …order to ſet aſide the Difficulty ariſing from the Queen …of Hungary's Proteſt againſt any Election for which the …Crown of Bohemia does not vote. The ſecond Conſe…quence is the Preſence of ſo many French Troops in the Heart of the Empire; there being ſome Electors who argue, that no Election can be free in the Sight of ſo many armed Witneſſes.

We hear from Madrid, that the Infanta is in the ninth Month of her Pregnancy,

By the Flanders Mail we have the following Advices.

Conſtantinople, Sept. 19. The Porte is taken up more than ever in conſulting Ways and Means to repel the Sophi of Perſia, who has penetrated a good Way into the Territories of this Empire. A Council was held two Days ago, wherein the Grand Vizier propos'd to put himſelf at the Head of the Army, if the Grand Signior would give him Leave; but it was reſolv'd by a Majority of Voices, that his Preſence was very neceſſary in this Capital, and that it would be ſufficient to ſend a Reinforcement of Troops towards the Frontiers, under Command of the Baſha of Bagdad. There has been a Report here, that Kouli Kan has been aſſaſſinated by his own Son, with a View to take the Throne himſelf; the Confirmation of which we long for with Impatience.

Vienna, Nov. 1. N. S. We are aſſur'd that the Deſign of the French and Bavarians is to ſurprize General Lobkowitz, at the ſame time that the Saxons are to intercept his March to Prague. Mean time, as the General knows their Deſign, and ſtill keeps his Poſt, 'tis to be believ'd that he is able to make Head againſt them. 'Tis conjectur'd, that the advantageous Situation of Budeneiſs will engage the Inhabitants to make a Defence, foraſmuch as they have actually refus'd to yield to the Propoſals that have been made to them by the Enemy. We are aſſur'd that by the Treaty betwixt the Queen of Hungary and the King of Pruſſia, the Towns of Neiſs, Troppau and Jagerdorff, in Upper Sileſia, are to be gariſon'd one half by Pruſſians, and the other half by Auſtrians; and that another of the Articles is a Neutrality on the Part of Pruſſia.

Extract of a Letter from the Hague, dated Nov. 17. N. S.

'Our laſt Letters from Vienna dated Nov. 4. adviſe, 'that notwithſtanding they are now in no great Pain in 'that City in relation to a Siege, yet all imaginable Care 'is taken in perfecting the Fortifications. Some Com'panies of Miners alſo are employ'd in making new and 'altering the old Mines, there being good Grounds to 'ſuſpect that a certain General has given the Enemy but 'too good Intelligence of the State things were in when 'he left this Place. We have for two or three Days laſt 'paſt had no News from our Army in Moravia, never'theleſs a fine Train of Field Artillery has been provided 'here, and will be ſent thither under an Eſcort of Part 'of our Gariſon, of which ſeveral other Regiments have 'Orders to hold themſelves in Readineſs to march at an 'Hour's Warning, whence we conclude that ſomething 'of Importance will be ſuddenly undertaken. The French 'and Bavarian Troops, when they quitted Auſtria to 'march into Bohemia, were guilty of the utmoſt Parfidy 'as well as Oppreſſion, plundering without Diſtinction 'even the Places they had put under Contribution. Ge'neral Charles Palfy with the Body of Troops under his 'Command is daily expected to paſs the Danube and en'ter the Upper Auſtria, in order to harraſs the Enemy on 'one Side, while Count Neuperg with his Army gives 'them all the Trouble he can on the other. Three Ba'varian Spies were taken here Yeſterday, and 'tis thought 'will be hang'd if they cannot make ſuch Diſcoveries as 'may render it more eligible to ſave their Lives. One 'of theſe Fellows had about him a very exact Liſt of the 'Armies in Germany, by which it appears, that the 'French and Bavarian Troops now in Bohemia are thus 'proportion'd. The French Troops conſiſt of 19,300 'Men, the Bavarians of 9,400. Our Army in Moravia is 'ſaid to conſiſt of 27,300 Foot and 12,400 Horſe, that 'of Prince Lobkowitz is reckon'd between 18 and 20000 'Men, the Hungarians under the Command of the Grand 'Duke and his Brother are eſteem'd between 15 and '20,000 Men. We have juſt now learnt that one of 'theſe Spies who would paſs for a Baron is in truth a 'Sharper, who for a notorious Act of Forgery was con'demn'd about three Years ſince to work at the Fortifi'cations at Raab, which however did not hinder him 'from making his Eſcape and appearing here again in a 'gay Habit and without the leaſt Concern.

'We learn from Francfort by Letters of the 9th Nov. 'that the Politicians obſerve there the Elector of Bavaria 'has not taken the Title of King of Bohemia in his Ma'niſeſto directed to the Inhabitants of that Country, upon 'his entering to take poſſeſſion of it. It is alſo reported, 'that by virtue of a Treaty of Partition concluded be'tween the Electors of Bavaria and Saxony, ſo much of 'Bohemia as lies on the other Side the River Elbe toge'ther with Moravia is to belong to the latter, and that 'on this Footing the Saxon and Pruſſian Troops are to 'join the French and Bavarians, who according to ſome 'Advices are within four Leagues of Prague.

'They write from Hamburgh of the 14th inſtant, 'that his Pruſſian Majeſty has given Directions to his Mi'niſters at Foreign Courts to declare, that the Report 'ſpread in relation to a Treaty between him and her 'Hungarian Majeſty are abſolutely without Foundation, 'his Majeſty having no Intention to make any Peace but 'in conjunction with his Allies. There is handed about 'here four Articles of a Treaty between the Kings of 'France and Pruſſia; but as they are not thought to be 'authentick, I ſhall not trouble you with them. We 'have certain Intelligence that the Patriots in Poland are 'now pretty eaſy, the Crown General Count Potocki be'ing made Caſtellan of Cracow and his Son Palatine of 'Kiow. Theſe Promotions have put an end to all Diſ'courſe of a Confederacy, which however may poſſibly 'revive again among ſuch of the great Men as have no 'Places.'
